

ABSTRACT OF DISCLOSURE

What is unique about American Dreamer is the design of the tabletop or surface on which the game is played. The tabletop is comprised of several sections, two for the dealer and one for the player. The dealer's sections, 'The River' and 'The Turn, are a set of boxes in which standard playing cards, six in total, are strategically placed. The player's section, 'The Player Station, contains several markings and drawings arranged in such a unique way as to allow the player to make a series of varying types of bets concerning which cards will be dealt into the River and Turn sections in each round of play. In addition, American Dreamer is one of very few casino-style table card games which utilizing the full deck of 54 cards including the Jokers.
